Editor's Notes

This past season, I couldn't do much. I had to give up going to a couple anime conventions because of more important priorities. The main reason for this is that I had to attend my daughter's graduation in San Francisco. Being there for five days was like going to an all-week convention… and what I spent that week proves it. But it was a fun week, taking all sorts of transportation because it sucks driving in San Francisco.

Still, there's still no word from that project we worked at the end of last year. For the most part, I'm beginning to loose faith in this project so I'm not having any high hopes of this ever coming to fruition anytime soon. It is what it is.

What surprised me this production deadline was when I was researching upcoming manga, I came across over 600 titles. That was the most titles I ever came across when I usually find from 250–350 titles on average. This shows how popular manga is over American comics.

Cast:
Maehara, Maki = Ishiya, Haruki
Asanagi, Umi = Iwami, Manaka
Amami, Yū = Suzushiro, Sayumi
Nitta, Nina = Hasegawa, Ikumi

Maki Maehara is the classic high school loner. He has no friends, keeps to himself, and spends his free time indulging in B-movies, video games, junk food (especially pizza), manga and soda — your typical otaku. Six months into the new school year, he has already accepted that nothing will change.

His circumstances change when he has a chance encounter with Umi Asanagi at a video rental store. Umi is one of the most popular girls in class — widely regarded by the boys as the second prettiest after her best friend Yū Amami. On the surface, she and Maki come from completely different worlds. But when they discover they share the same "guilty pleasure" taste in cheesy horror and B-movies, Umi boldly asks him to be friends.

Maehara, Maki

Having spent her childhood constantly transferring schools, she entered high school without ever learning how to make friends; however, she immediately hit it off with Umi, who shared her interests—becoming her very first friend.

CV: Ishiya, Haruki

Wary of social repercussions, Maki agrees only on the condition that their friendship stays completely secret. Thus begins a hidden weekly ritual: every Friday after school, Umi comes over to Maki's house. The two hang out, watch movies, play games, eat junk food and talk freely — something both of them desperately needed. What starts as a simple secret friendship slowly deepens as they realize how much they genuinely enjoy each other's company.

Asanagi, Umi

She excels academically and has a pleasant demeanor, and is referred to by the boys as "the second-cutest girl in the class."

CV: Iwami. Manaka

As the story progresses, their circle quietly expands when Yū (the actual prettiest girl and Umi's best friend) discovers their secret and gradually gets involved too. Later in the story, Nina Nitta, a friend that hangs out with Yū and Umi, interacts more with the main trio and occasionally joins group activities.

Maki Maehara is an average-looking high school boy with dark hair. He has a somewhat gloomy or plain aura that makes him blend into the background. Maki is introverted, socially awkward, and self-aware. He is the epitome of a classic loner who has accepted his place at the bottom of the social hierarchy. Mature for his age, he is observant, and surprisingly thoughtful once he opens up. He can be blunt and has a dry sense of humor. While Maki enjoys his solitary hobbies (usually B-movies), he's not necessarily unhappy — he's content in his own world until Umi enters it. Through his secret friendship with Umi, he gradually learns to open up, becomes more confident, and starts facing some of his emotional baggage (especially family-related issues).

Umi Asanagi is attractive girl with short black hair. She's widely considered the second prettiest girl in class (right behind Yū). She is playful, fun-loving, and teasing — especially toward Maki. She's outgoing and sociable on the surface, but she hides a significant inferiority complex because she's constantly overshadowed by her best friend Yū. Umi is caring, has strong morals (she dislikes malicious bullying), and values genuine connections. Behind her popular-girl mask, she's a bit of a geek who loves the same low-budget movies and otaku stuff as Maki. Umi has been best friends with Yū Amami since childhood. She's tired of always coming in "second place" and of people only seeing her through the lens of her friendship with Yū. Her secret Friday hangouts with Maki become her emotional safe space.

Yū Amami has long blonde hair and blue eyes (due to partial foreign descent) and is the third in the trio. She is widely regarded as the undisputed #1 prettiest girl in class. You is extremely energetic, bubbly, and cheerful — basically a "ray of sunshine." However, she can be pushy, meddlesome, and sometimes entitled. She has trouble reading the room and often assumes everyone wants to be part of a big, lively group. Deep down, she's kind-hearted and genuinely wants to help people (including trying to "save" Maki

Amami, Yū

The undisputed most beautiful girl in the class. She has been best friends with Kai since elementary school.

CV: Suzushiro, Sayumi

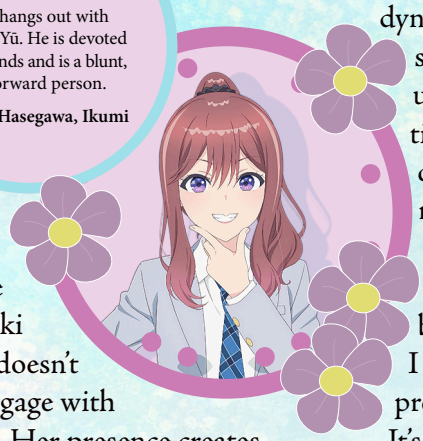
from loneliness at first). You and Umi are childhood friends. She comes from a more outgoing background (used to attend an all-girls school). Once she discovers Umi and Maki's secret, she gradually inserts herself into their group, adding chaos and energy.

Nina Nitta is a girl tall in stature (noticeably taller than Umi and Yū) with pink/reddish hair and is a prominent supporting character in for the trio. She serves as the third member of the popular girls' trio alongside Umi and Yū. While Umi and Yū become deeply involved in Maki's secret circle, Nina remains mostly on the periphery of that group dynamic. She functions as the realistic, grounded friend in the popular clique and often acts as a voice of reason (or mild chaos) in social situations. Nina represents the outside world of the popular group. She knows Maki exists but doesn't initially engage with him much. Her presence creates natural tension and comedy because: she notices when Yū drags Maki into social situations he doesn't want; she provides contrast to the growing closeness between Maki, Umi, and Yū; and later in the story, she interacts more with the main trio and occasionally joins group activities.

Nitta Nina

He often hangs out with Umi and Yū. He is devoted to his friends and is a blunt, straightforward person.

CV: Hasegawa, Ikumi



Class de 2-banme ni Kawaii Onna no Ko to Tomodachi ni Natta (light novel, manga, and ongoing anime adaptation) enjoys solidly positive reception, particularly among fans of wholesome, low-stakes romantic come-dies. It is frequently praised as a comfortable, feel-good entry in the genre rather than a groundbreaking one. The secret friendship dynamic, shared otaku interests (B-movies, junk food), and slow-burn romance are major highlights. The dynamic in Umi and Maki's relationship is widely praised for feeling natural and genuine as well as appreciating Umi's depth (her inferiority complex and hidden side) and Maki's relatable introversion. The trio with Yū adds enjoyable chaos.

It doesn't reinvent the wheel — but follows familiar rom-com shows. I recommend it as a charming, low-pressure rom-com ideal for relaxation. It's not the best anime out there, but its consistency for being genuinely endearing and well-written within its genre. If you enjoy shows like Horimiya, Yahari Ore no Seishun Rabukome wa Machigatteiru (lighter side) or Karakai Jōzu no Takagi-san, this one tends to land very well. ❖ Eiji Tanaka

It is a class specialized in defense, designed to draw enemy attacks and protect allies. Compared to other defensive classes, it lacks versatility, and its offensive capabilities are so poor that leveling up is a struggle. Consequently, it was dismissed not merely as an "unfortunate" choice, but as a "flawed" class. Elymas, born into the Count Edvanghn family—a lineage of legendary Sword Saints—manifested this "flawed" Heavy Knight class during the "Rite of Blessing," a crucial ceremony for the heir. Stripped of his succession rights, he was unjustly banished. Yet, in that moment, he regained memories of his past life and realized that this world was identical to "Magic World," a VR online game he had played obsessively before he died.

In an alternate version of the early 20th century where technological progress evolved along a different path shaped by steam power, Kyoto is blanketed in constant smoke.

A boy, hardened by the loss of his brother, grows distrustful after their shared dream of an "Age of Electricity" is cut short. A deeply devout girl hides her dreams and regrets for her deceased mother deep within her heart. When the two cross paths, they set about exploring the secrets of the 20th Century Electrical Catalog, a glimpse into the future they long for.

Together, they must confront their pasts and carve a path toward the future they once believed in.

Kimi-Ai (short for The Next Duke Who Said 'I Have No Intention of Loving You' Is Somehow Doting on Me) is a heart-warming romantic comedy filled with sweet, heart-fluttering moments. It begins when Elsa—an impoverished noblewoman who remains optimistic despite her family's decline—and Julius—an elite but socially awkward heir to a dukedom—enter into a "contract marriage" the very day they meet. This is the story of how, through their daily interactions and by experiencing each other's kindness, the two gradually open their hearts to one another, eventually becoming a "real couple" and a true family.

Once upon a time, there lived a mermaid princess named Lara. She grew up happy and cherished, loved dearly by her father—the King of the Sea—and her sisters. One day, Lara fell in love with a human prince from the world above. It was a forbidden love, strictly prohibited in the realm of the merfolk. Yet, Lara journeyed to the surface; she drank a potion given to her by the witch Grace and transformed into a human. However, unless she found "true love," she would vanish into sea foam. Lara had yearned for love with a human—but that wish went unfulfilled, and she dissolved into foam, disappearing into the sea. Two hundred years passed. After this long slumber, the mermaid princess Lara was reborn in Lake Biwa—determined, this time, to find "true love."

FNS (Fuji TV)

The year is 1333 A.D. The Kamakura Shogunate, which had laid the foundation for the samurai rule of Japan, was destroyed by a rebellion by Takauji Ashikaga, a trusted shogunate vassal. Having lost everything and fallen into the depths of despair, Tokiyuki Hōjo, escapes from burning Kamakura with the guidance of Yorishige Suwa, a priest who claims to be a god…Tokiyuki runs away and ends up in Suwa, where he meets friends he can trust and gathers the strength to take back Kamakura. In contrast to the samurai's lifestyle of "fighting" and "dying," he overcomes the great turbulence of changing times by "running away" and "living." What will happen to Tokiyuki's game of tag to restore the world, which unfolds in a turbulent world filled with heroes?

Akihito is a college student obsessed with good looks and carnal pleasure, but he can't stand the handsome-yet-aloof Sae. Things come to a head when Akihito is shot down at a singles mixer by a girl who's set her romantic sights on Sae. Furious, he follows Sae to the hotel district where he learns Sae's secret: he's gay, and he's having trouble enjoying himself in the bedroom. Breaking through Sae's mental barriers is exactly the sexy challenge Akihito needed. It awakens something in them both. Will they ever be able to control themselves again?

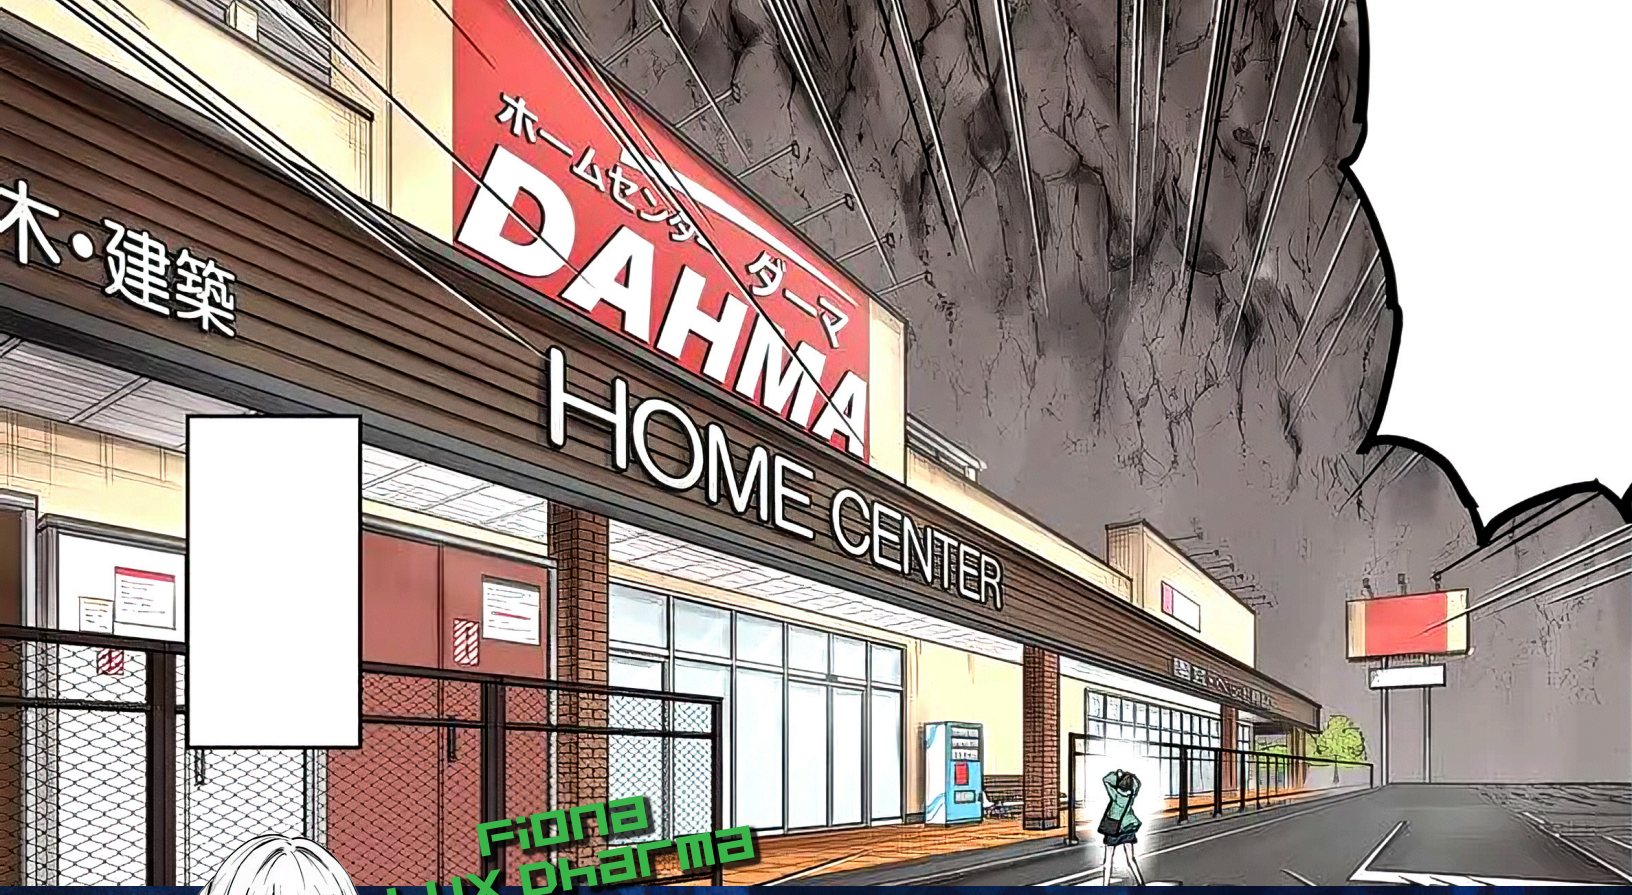
Saeki, Maho
Fiona Lux Dharma



Fiona Lux Dharma

I've come across many isekai works out there. Other than the typical transmigration, summoning or reincarnation, there are some that come along with plot device that's somewhat trending. You have one where the protagonist bring along a smartphone, there's one with gaming gear, a few that are able to summon some kind of online store, and one that comes along with a convenience store. When I came across Home Center-goto Yobidasareta Watashi no Daimeikyuu Renovation!, I said to myself "no that's an interesting take on the genre." Along with the summoning of the main protagonist, a home center comes along too.

Maho Saeki is visiting her favorite local home center (come center/hardware store) when a sudden earthquake knocks her unconscious. When she wakes up, she finds the entire store—and herself are transported to another world, specifically the deepest level of the Great Labyrinth of Melquodia (or Melquodia Dungeon), one of the world's largest and most perilous unexplored dungeons.

Fiona Lux Dharma is the young female adventurer who finds and tires to wake up Maho in the home center. Maho though she was a cosplay player at first. Fiona's the one who also accidentally summoned Maho (and the store) via a desperate magical ritual after being trapped by a trap. Fiona is optimistic but unlucky, and the pair faces immediate threats: they must defeat the dungeon's floor boss—a powerful Red Dragon—to have any hope of reaching the surface.

Maho discovers the store's "infinite inventory" (products restock or are endlessly available as they reappear after use) is their greatest weapon. Using tools, materials, chemicals, food and ingenuity, the duo begins a bottom-up conquest of the dungeon. What starts as survival—securing food, building shelter, battling monsters and leveling up—evolves into large-scale renovation, exploration, city-building and interactions with the surface world.

Maho is a normal countryside high school student who frequently visits her local home center, called Dharma, as her personal sanctuary or "toy box of endless possibilities," if you call that normal. She enjoys browsing tools, materials and gadgets—especially on weekends. Her life leaves her with few other entertainments, turning the store into a playground for her creativity. Her catchphrase is "I can manage!" She stays calm and practical even in dire situations, quickly adapting to the isekai crisis. She is kind-hearted, shown early when she prioritizes feeding and comforting the starving Fiona. She is athletic enough to handle physical challenges but relies more on brains and preparation.

Fiona comes from a noble family (the Lux Dharma house—a coincidence?). She is an experienced adventurer who primarily explores upper-to-mid levels of dungeons. Through a desperate magical summoning ritual (likely involving a contract with a god), she accidentally transports Maho and the entire home center to the deepest floor of the dangerous Great Labyrinth of Melquodia. At the time of summoning, she had been trapped for days—starving, dehydrated and isolated—after falling into a trap or venturing too deep. She is a capable warrior with physical abilities far surpassing ordinary people, blessings from a warrior god and experience hunting monsters. However, her luck is notoriously poor, earning her the description of a "misfortunate adventurer." Fiona is optimistic and determined on the surface, but she has a vulnerable side. In one chapter, she breaks down emotionally from loneliness and hunger, crying in Maho's arms before quickly regaining composure. Her bad luck and reactions to Maho's modern solutions create comedic moments, especially when a manga panel shows her "taking a drag." She is often shocked or overwhelmed by the "infinite stock" and Maho's DIY ingenuity.

The unique "home center cheat" premise is pretty creative and fun. After reading a few other reviews, people love how everyday DIY tools, materials, and products are cleverly used for survival, combat, renovation and world-building. Maho and Fiona's dynamic is frequently highlighted — their "yuri-ish" partnership brings humor, heart and strong character appeal. Maho's optimistic resourcefulness and Fiona's misfortunate knight persona create enjoyable interactions. Light comedy, cozy slice-of-life elements (meals, baths, shop management), and creative problem-solving keep it entertaining. The general feel of Home Center-goto Yobidasareta Watashi no Daimeikyuu Renovation! is that it's a well-liked, feel-good isekai with a standout hardware store twist that appeals to fans of crafting, base-building and cozy fantasy adventures. Although it's not revolutionary, its likable protagonists, humorous tone and creative use of modern items in a fantasy setting make it one of the more enjoyable recent entries in the genre for its target audience. Many call it a favorite or "surprisingly good" among similar titles. If this is the kind of story you're interested in, give it a try. Unfortunately, there is no official English-translated version available. ❖ Ed Gomez

Gals Can't Be Kind to Otaku?!

Otaku ni Yasashii Gal wa Inai!? (Gals Can't Be Kind to Otaku!?) is a Japanese manga series written by Norishiro-chan and illustrated by Sakana Uozumi, which began serialization in Monthly Comic Zenon in August 2021 and has reached 12 volumes as of early 2026. It received a television anime adaptation in Spring 2026, produced by TMS Entertainment, directed by Shin Mita, and currently airing with around 10–12 episodes planned for the season.

The story centers on Takuya Seo, a reserved high school otaku who prefers to keep a low profile to avoid ridicule for his love of Glittermon, a magical girl anime aimed primarily at young girls. He sits behind two popular "gyaru (gal)" classmates: the cheerful and energetic Kotoko Ijichi and the cooler, more aloof Kei Amane. Their worlds collide when a simple act—like borrowing a special Glittermon eraser—reveals shared interests in anime, games and fandom. What starts as an unlikely friendship evolves into deeper bonds, with both girls developing romantic feelings for Takuya, who remains largely oblivious to their affections.

This setup plays on familiar tropes: the socially awkward otaku protagonist, the "cliques" divide between popular gals and nerds, and the hidden depths of characters who don't fit stereotypes. The title itself is a playful hook questioning whether gals can genuinely be kind to otaku, subverting expectations by showing that, in this case, they can—and do.

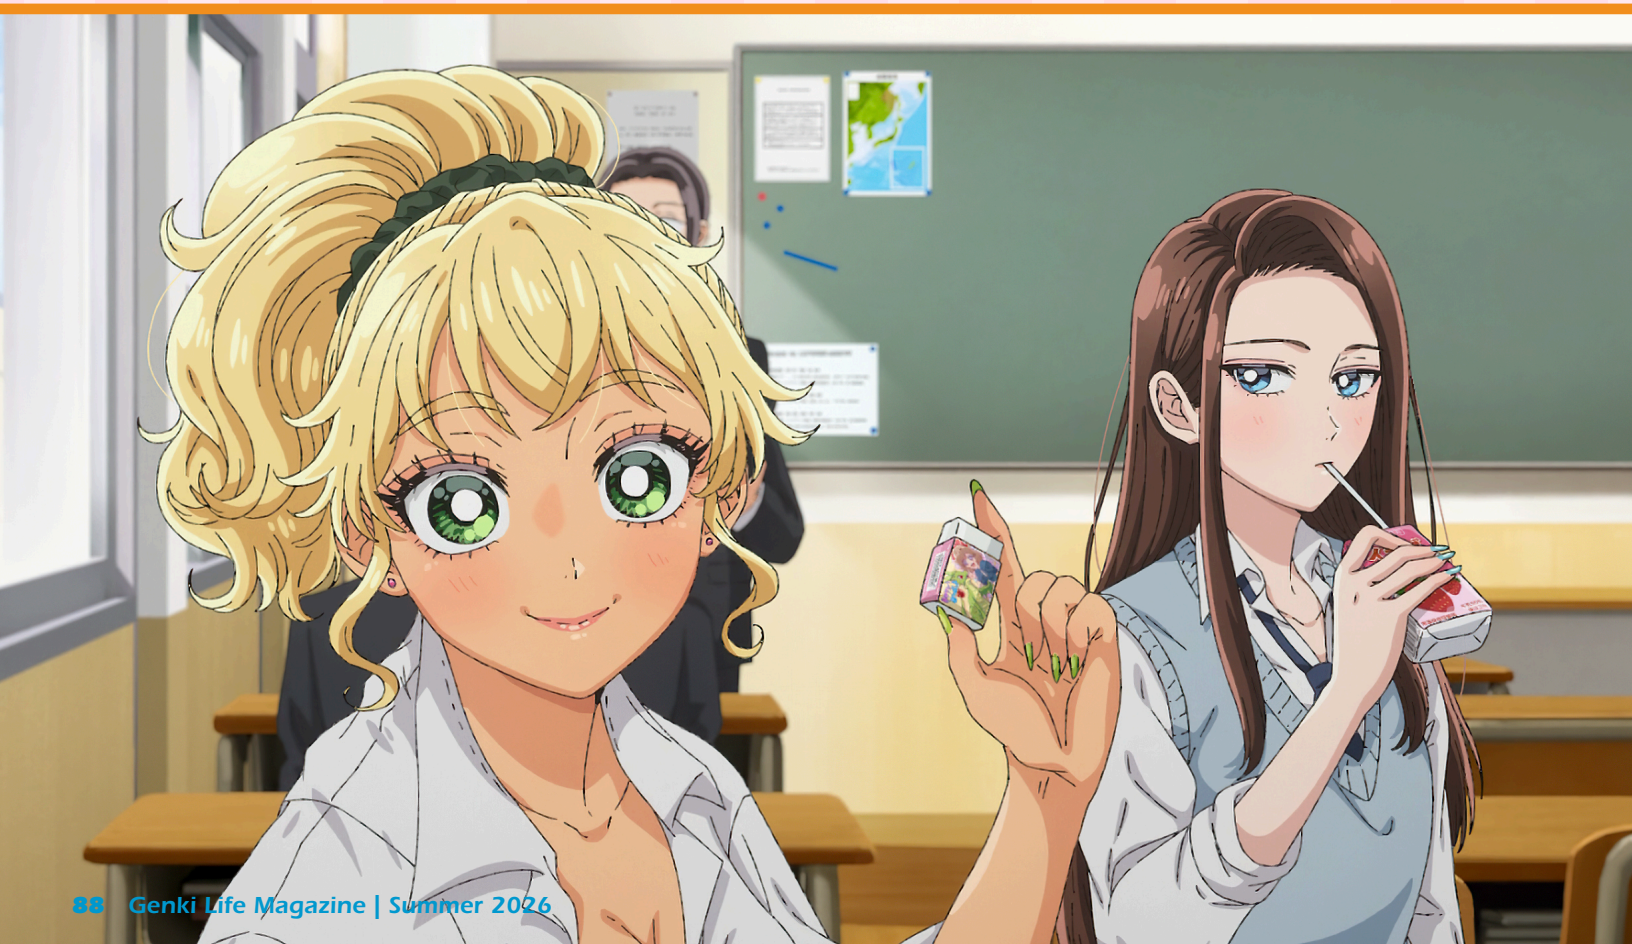
Strengths in Storytelling and Characters

One of the series' primary appeals lies in its lighthearted, wholesome tone and focus on genuine friendship and shared passions. The core trio—Takuya, Kotoko and Amane—drives the narrative through their interactions. Kotoko is portrayed as outgoing, non-judgmental and quick to embrace Takuya's hobbies, providing much of the energetic, positive energy. Amane, on the other hand, acts as the tsundere-like figure: outwardly denying her otaku tendencies (often blaming a fictional "little sister") while geeking out internally, which creates comedic tension and relatable awkwardness.

Takuya himself is a classic self-insert-friendly protagonist—kind, considerate and passionate about his interests without being overly abrasive. His growth involves opening up and navigating social situations he once avoided. The manga and anime excel at depicting the joy of finding like-minded people, with extended scenes of the group discussing anime, playing games or geeking out over merchandise. These moments feel authentic to otaku culture, capturing the excitement of discovery and the comfort of acceptance.

The comedy often stems from situational humor, such as Amane's failed attempts to hide her fandom, school events that force interactions or the girls' competitive (yet friendly) interest in Takuya. It's not revolutionary, but the execution is charming and frequently elicits smiles rather than big laughs. The romance elements develop slowly, leaning into misunderstandings and obliviousness, which keeps the tone breezy and avoids heavy drama early on.

Visually, the manga benefits from clean, expressive artwork by Sakana Uozumi, particularly in character designs that distinguish the gyaru aesthetic (fashion, makeup, hairstyles) from Takuya's more subdued look. The anime adaptation has been praised for solid production values, good voice acting and a catchy opening theme ("Hide and Seek," performed by I-dle) that captures the fun vibe. Pacing in the early episodes feels natural, balancing slice-of-life moments with budding relationships.



Potential Drawbacks and Criticisms

While enjoyable for many, the series treads very familiar ground in the rom-com and school-life genres. The "loner guy befriends popular girls through shared hobbies" trope echoes numerous other titles, sometimes leading to perceptions of it as wish-fulfillment or formulaic. Some viewers note that Takuya can come across as bland or passive, which may limit emotional investment for those seeking more dynamic protagonists.

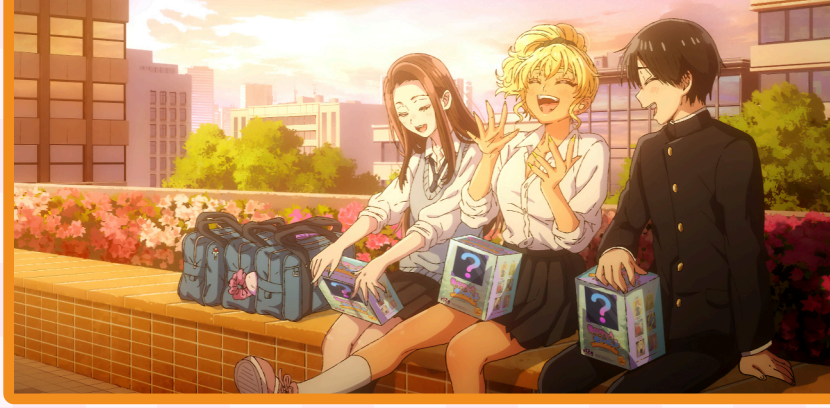
The central gag—Amane's secret otaku identity and the resulting antics—provides consistent humor but risks feeling repetitive over longer arcs if not varied. The romantic triangle (or potential harem elements) introduces light rivalry between Ijichi and Amane, which adds tension but could frustrate readers who prefer straightforward pairings or deeper exploration of one relationship. As a seinen title, it handles these themes mildly, avoiding heavy ecchi or explicit content, which suits its wholesome intent but might underwhelm fans of edgier material.

Ijichi, Kotoko
cv: Serizawa, Yū

Adaptation-wise, the anime covers early manga chapters faithfully, with positive reception for capturing the charm, though some fans of the source material debate minor changes or the depth of later developments. With the manga ongoing, the story has room to expand beyond school settings into more personal or external conflicts, but early volumes focus heavily on the trio's dynamic.

Themes and Broader Appeal

At its heart, Otaku ni Yasashii Gal wa Inai!? explores themes of prejudice, hidden identities, friendship across social divides and the universality of fandom. It challenges stereotypes about "gals" being superficial or otaku being isolated, showing how common interests can bridge gaps. Emotional healing through acceptance and communication features prominently, making it relatable for anyone who's felt out of place due to their hobbies.



The series also touches lightly on modern relationship dynamics influenced by online communities and shared media, without delving too deeply into heavier social commentary. Its accessibility makes it suitable for a broad audience, particularly teens and young adults, balancing cute moments with mild romantic tension.

Overall Assessment

Otaku ni Yasashii Gal wa Inai!? is a solid entry in the romantic comedy/slice-of-life genre. It doesn't reinvent the wheel but executes its premise with warmth, humor and likable characters that many find endearing. The manga offers more depth and ongoing storylines for dedicated readers, while the anime provides an easy, feel-good viewing experience ideal for unwinding.

Kei, Amane
cv: Inagaki, Konomi

Strengths include strong character chemistry, relatable otaku representation and consistent charm. Weaknesses are its predictability and occasional reliance on tropes. If you're in the mood for something light, fun and focused on friendship turning into more—with plenty of anime/manga references—it's worth checking out. Fans of titles like other school-based rom-coms with hidden geek identities will likely enjoy it most. Those seeking intense drama, complex plots or subversion might find it too straightforward.

In a crowded field of similar anime and manga, this one stands out for its earnest celebration of fandom and the simple joy of connection. Whether it becomes a standout classic or a pleasant seasonal watch depends on personal taste, but it delivers on its promise of wholesome entertainment. The ongoing manga ensures more content for those who get invested, and the anime's reception suggests it has successfully brought the story to a wider audience. ❖ ICSSC

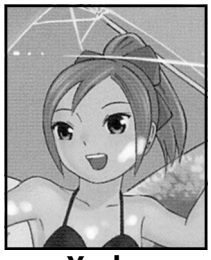
Kawamura, Masashi

17 years old. Although he looks like an ordinary young man with nothing special to write about, he has a fairly wide range of knowledge, including how to grow crops and drive a car, which most people don't know about.

Sanae

A 17-year-old girl who is one of the four survivors of humanity's apocalypse. She has medium bob hair that doesn't reach her shoulders and wears glasses. Although he has a somewhat serious personality, he is generally gentle and carefree.



Yaeko

18 years old. The oldest person alive. She has brownish hair tied into a ponytail with a ribbon. She has a very bright and active personality and is very upbeat. She doesn't agree with the wishful thinking that "humanity will surely return."

Anna

10 years old. Her medium-short hair is tied in two high knots. She retains a childish personality befitting her age, and has an innocent personality, such as taking off her clothes without worrying about Masashi Kawamura's presence.

Chikyū no Hōkago
by Akihito Yoshitomi

Mysterious creatures known as "Phantoms" began appearing across the globe. Under the relentless assault of these Phantoms, nearly every human vanished from the face of the Earth within the span of a single year.

Another year has since passed. In Japan, four individuals: Masashi Kawamura, Sanae, Yaeko and Anna, have managed to survive. Though living in fear of the Phantoms that occasionally make their presence known, and harboring deep anxiety about the future, they nonetheless embrace their youth with optimism and live each day to the fullest. On an Earth that has fallen silent—much like an endless afternoon after school—they cultivate vegetables, catch fish, and lead a carefree, self-determined daily life together, just the four of them. Yet, at times, they find themselves longing for the days of old when everything was normal. As they cast their thoughts toward the loved ones they left behind, they continue their search for other survivors—clinging to the hope that others still exist somewhere out there.
